ELI LILLY SYMPOSIUM: RESILIENCE IN ATTENTION DEFICIT/HYPERACTIVITY DISORDER (ADHD)

Thursday, May 8th, 14:45 – 16:15,
Room TIMIS B+MURES A

Considering ADHD a neurodevelopmental disorder, with different degrees of impairment and comorbidities across the life span, that increase the impact on child's and family's quality of life as well costs for the entire community where they belong to, specialists in mental health, educators and policy makers are asked to find strategies to enhance high protective environmental factors and positive interactions to ensure early promotion of resilience in this disorder. The symposium will start from the new perspective of DSM – 5 on ADHD and will continue with discussing about the factors related to resilience in children with ADHD and in their families. We'll also look toward the early complex assessment and accessible monitoring tools to evaluate the efficacy of medical, psychological, educational interventions and strong points in resilient individuals.
